To the advantages of hydraulic brake operation -positive control, self-equalization, reliability -Chevrolet has added the equally important advantages of its own exclusive brake mechanism within the drums. Chevrolet alone has the fully controlled braking gained through the use of double-articulated brake shoe linkage—a design that automatically insures full contact between brake shoes and drum, and automatically adjusts itself as the brake lining gradually wears from long usage.

This will be one of the greatest sea pageants in British history.

Commerce, to-day discussed Japanese shipping rights on the coast of India. Official circles are most reticent regarding the outcome of the discussions but it is unofficially understood that the Japanese Government does not consider that the engagement of Japanese shipping in the Indian coastal trade is inflicting losses on Indian shipping. Competent circles interpret this attitude as a refusal by Japan to forego its coastal trading rights in If, however, Japan refuses to modify its attitude it is believed that the Indian Government may be obliged to consider the introduction

BEAUTY IN WOOD

Straight Grained OAK...

AY Coronation furnishing colours will g bring woods into prominence this year, for furniture provides the balance and contrast which is so important to the success of an. interior scheme.

New fashlons in wood lean towards lightness; and there are several new woods and finishes which are as attractive as they

Flame birch, for example, is a creamy wood with a rosy flush and figuring which reminds one of leaping flames; the creamy whiteness of sycamore will appeal to people who like plain surfaces; golden woods include natural birch and bird's-eyo maple, and there are several new shades in walnut and in waxed and weathered oak.

Sycamore & Ebony

Among the wainuts is a particularly lovely straightgrained wood which comes from Australia.

There is also the charm of contrast in the furniture itself. Sycamore is banded with darker burr wainut and sometimes with macassar chony; quartering provides interesting contrasts in the arrangement of the grain.

You will find that all these new woods are supremely adaptable, for their lightness lends itself to wider colour harmonies in the rest of the furnishings.

The new furniture, too, shows ideas for saving space. A dining room suite in flame birch is a good example. This has a round pedestal dining table with a good solid base, specially designed for a small dining room. Although smaller than the orthodox oblong shape, it will seat four to five people in comfort.

The sideboard to go with it has a tier of aix amail drawers on one side. which struck me as practical for the smart in a lounge furnished in offwhite and navy blue, and would incidentally form a subtle Coronation colour scheme. These all-wood chairs are comfortable to sit in, by the way, for both seat and back are scientifically shaped.

Returning to the rosy shade of flame birch, blue or bluish green are two good centrasting colours if you are planning a setting for it. Walls and carpet should be in a warm shade of rosy fawn, with nigger brown rugs.

The new unit furniture is one of the most interesting developments in natural oak. Every piece is complete in itself, but it can be combined with others to make one fitment.

Unit Fitments

The unit divan siment is a space-saving idea for a small bedroom: it includes bookshelves, small cupboards and bed-side table, and not only does. It provide valuable storage space, but gives the divan a finished look when it is in use as a settee. One divan fitment in natural waxed oak is banded with walnut. This contrast of light and dark wood is also used for dining-room units, the walnut forming a solld plinth and making the simple handles for drawers and cupboards.

A sideboard can be built up of a cupboard and drawer unit, rounded at one side, set alongside a larger cupboard unit made alightly higher. The different levels of the top adds

Modern Dining Table

A dining table to match is refectory type, with rounded finps at each end instead of to draw leaf, so that when fully extended it is a graceful oval table. This shape, incidentally, allows you to accommodate more people. Off-white and nigger brown is a good setting for natural oak. Off-white walls, nigger brown curtains, oatmeal chair seats, and a brilliant splash of colour in a Persian or Indian rug for the

Another idea which is especially suitable for this low-bullt unit furniture, is to have the lower half of the dining room widls covered with a dado in wood veneer in light oak with a top banding of walnut to match the furni-

The wood veneer is hung like wall paper, looks effective with the cream walls and ceiling, and is extremely practical for a room which is often used as the family sitting room. Grey wenthered oak, another of the light finishes for onk, has a period touch in the shape of wrought-iron strap hinges and handles. This is a bedroom suite set in a room furnished entirely in soft dusty pink and grey-pink being used for the walls and celling, and grey for the carpet, with a touch of vivid inde green provided by candles on the dressing table.

Spanish Influence

Iron is also used for new furniture with a Spanish influence. Chairs and table tops are in pickled oak, the underframe of tables and sideboards being wrought iron, which is painted off-white or in colour to match the room. There are painted iron lamp standards to match.

Straight-grained wainut veneered on to solid mahogany is a delightful choice for bedroom furniture. The plain flush fronts of wardrobes and chest show off the grain in its full beauty.

Cupboard Tricks TO GIVE YOU MORE ROOM

GREAT problem in any house is cuphoard

Built-in Cupboards are the ideal thing. They take up the least room.

If you are hard pressed for space, a cupboard with sliding doors is best, but for convenience nothing beats a plain cupboard with ordinary doors with a lock.

You can divide this type of cupboard into two, one side for hanging and one for shelves, and you can put the shelves on ledges so that they silde in and out like trays.

Linen Cupboards

THE situation of a linear cupboard is very important on account of the heating it

Find if you can a convenient recess for it near your bathroom or kitchen. Then the pipes can generally easily be extended to the bottom of it.

The cupboard should be fitted up with shelves made of boards about an inch, and a half apart, to allow the hot air to rise to the top. When the linen comes back from the laundry each week, always put At at the bottom of the pile which is already in the cupboard. Then it is certain to get properly, aired and only goes to the laundry in its turn, getting less wear and tear.

Kitchen Cupboards

THE average kitchen is so ismall you can hardly turn fround in it, and there is seldom room for more than one cupboard So it needs very careful planning. A good tip is to space two or three wide shelves (or as many as you can lilt in) two feet apart, and put a shelf half the width of these wide ones in between, for saucers, jugs and

Questions were asked about his exploit in the House of Commons when Miss Irene Ward (Con., Wallsend) told Sir John Simon, the Home Secretary, that the Admiralty 'phoned Scotland-yard about the dis-appearance of the boy, and that Scotland-yard withheld information. Sir John replied that the Admiralty were satisfied that the police gave all the information they had,

HERE'S HIS STORY

This is the story of James Hall's travels pieced together from police. reports, friends' stories, and Sir John Simon's statement.

James, an only son whose father died from war wounds, had achieved his life's ambition and joined the Navy-after his mother had tried to dissuade him.

He spent his Christmas leave with his mother, who is ent taker of business property in Eldon-square, Newcustle.

On January 4 his leave expired. His mother saw him comfortably seated in a train for Harwich, where his training ship Ganges lay.

There was a fond embrace between mother and son and young Hall spoke to his mother of the time when he would again get back to Newcastle to see her. But James changed into a train which landed him at King's Cross with the 4s. 6d. in his pocket. He decided to work his way back to Newcastle.

Relatives thought he had been shanghaled. His mother worried, developed a nervous breakdown. Then Newcastle police found Hall -before he had reached his homeand sent him back to his ship.

Last December it was reported that she had had film tests made in Hollywood, but later she denied having had them. It was also said that she intended to star with her contemplated capital expenditure brother Fred in another picture of the "Top Hat" type, but nothing

TWO MISSIONARY MARTYRS

VICTIMS OF CHINESE COMMUNISTS

THEIR PLACES By the Very Rev. C. A. Alington, D.D., Dean of Durham

700 RECRUITS TO TAKE

The word "martyr" is a noble one, but, like the other noble word "saint," it, has been allowed to lose the vividness of its meaning and to become for most people a mere description of a character in ancient history. But, as there have been many authentic saints since the Canon of the New Testament was closed, so there have been many martyrs who deserved the name as fully as Saint Stephen. This obvious fact will be vividly brought home to any who read a small book called "The Triumph of John and Betty Stam," published by the China Inland Mis-

John Stam, while a student at an American Bible Institute, fell in love with a fellow student; their engagement was delayed because he felt that it might be his duty to do ploneer work in the far north-west of China, involving risks which he could not ask his wife to share, while she overcome and to China they went.

Early in 1934 bands of Communists suddenly attacked the town where they were living: after pillaging and Bread looting the place they carried off the Stams with their infant daughter, less than three months old, in the hope that the capture and possible murder of American citizens would embarrass Gen. Chiang in his relation with foreign powers.

John Stam's last letter ends: "We are in the hands of the Communists. . . They want 20,000 dollars before they will free us, which we have told them we are sure will not be paid. Famine relief money, and our personal money and effects are all in their hands. God give you wisdom in what to do, and give us grace and fortitude. He is

SACRIFICE TO SAVE BABY

The prayer was heard: no "wisdom" could have saved their lives, but "grace and fortitude" were not lacking. A few days later, in spite of the pleading of some native Christians, they were led out to death on a little hill "beyond the city wall" by a jeering mob of Red soldiers. So to work every day because he could was fulfilled the other prayer offered not afford a new bicycle tyre. by John Stam in an earlier letter:
"May God be glorifled, whether by life or death," and the wish uttered by his wife, in some touching verses written five years before, that she might carry the gold ring he had given her into the city whose streets are of pure gold.

Their little daughter was saved by the miraculous devotion of some native converts and, it is said, by the self-sacrifice of a released prisoner who, when the Reds cried "Who will die for the Foreign Devil baby?" gave his life for hers, though he was not himself a Christian.

It is, in a sense, a very simple story, but it is a very noble one. Among the objects looted from their house was a small bronze plaque which has been recovered: it bears in relief, above a cross and crown, the words "Not Somehow-But Triumphantly."

It is not surprising to read that, at the memorial service held in their honour at the college to which they both belonged, over 700 young men gistrar in Bankruptcy, Public and women pledged themselves to Trustee, clerk of the Supreme Court, take their places as witnesses for Christ. Still, as of old, "the blood of murtyrs is the seed of the Church."

WORLD'S BEST THEATRE FOR B.B.C.

(By Jonah Barrington)

TATORK is to begin at once on television's first theatre, which will create a revolution in production methods.

The theatre at Alexandra Palace, leased to the B.B.C. when they went there last summer but disused for lack of funds, will be equipped at the cost of a special Government grant.

The auditorium will be aftered to let dozen or more stage sets be built round the walls: ,---

/Televised plays will be able to shift from scene to scene, without interruption by fading out one camera and fading in another. Variety artists will be able to perform in front of their own scenery, as in a music hall,

Great galleries will be built in the roof to house the cameras for overhead shots. The most up-to-dale system of lighting will be installed. At present television has only one small studio, necessitating a fade-out and an interval when the scenery is shifted. Within eight months it will have the largest and best equipped studio in the world.

WITH 26 JOBS

The most versatile girl in 'Australia at the moment is Miss Elleon O'Nell, of Darwin. She holds 26 positions under the Northern Territory Administration, and has just presided over sittings of the Commonwealth Supreme Court in Bankruptcy, during which the Administrator and the leading barristers of the town appeared before her in their legal capacity. During the absence of the sheriff

(Mr. Nichols), who is on extended leave. Miss O'Nell is carrying on the duties of Registrar in Divorce, Reclerk of the local Court, sheriff, associate to Judge Wells, and bailiff of all jurisdiction of the Court. The whole of the work of the Justice Department and many other official duties are carried out solely by Miss O'Nell, says Austral News.

Recently, when a man was tried before Judge Wells for murder, Miss O'Nell was placed in an unenviable position for a 22-year-old girl, as had a conviction and sentence of death been recorded the gruesome duty of arranging for the execution of the prisoner would have fallen on her shoulders.

It was, as she stated later, with considerable relief that she heard the verdict of "not guilty" pronounced by the jury.

Miss O'Neil, who is always cool and collected while lawyers argue, is a pretty brunette. She is not only the first woman to preside as Rogistrar over the Bankruptcy Court, but also the first woman to appear in Court without stockings.

STRIVING FOR ACCORD

It is the desire to preserve peace which leads nations into treaties, alliances and accords which, frequently, if not inevitably, bear quite a different fruit than that desired. But at the moment diplomats are putting the finishing touches upon a three-power peace preservation pact in Europe to which Great Britain, France and Russia are parties, and others are clearing the way for what gives promise of being a more solid system of security in the Far East. Both these movements are born of fear. They are the outgrowth of a desire of leaders to avoid cause of clash in the future; and yet they differ materially. The first, the Anglo-Franco-Russian alignment, is directed against a specific party the so-called Rome-Berlin axis, to which it is the apparent desire of its originators to attract the smaller Central European powers with a view to spreading the influence of the Nazi and Fascist nations. In effect, the accord is the answer to Austria's plea for an assurance of protection against encroachment by her powerful neighbours, and for that reason, because of the incipient threat it contains, will probably heighten the animosity of the Nazi-Fascist people against the more democratically inclined fathers of the "peace machinery." Thus it defeats its purpose. The nations are approaching the alignment in the Far East in quite a different way. It appears to be the desire to arrange an accord which will obviate the necessity of forming defensive alliances. To do this a first step is obviously to secure a frank and complete statement of foreign policy by all parties affected and generally clear the Air of any distrust or suspicion, the presence of which is fatal to the never very robust peace of the societies left the country, many of them never to return. Eight hundred peace it is a remarkable document. The State of Agriculture

AN INVESTIGATION

For some time past the state of agriculture in England has been agitating many minds and the articles of Agricultural Corresponents have been keenly followed whether with approval or disapproval. Such was, indeed, the interest that it was decided to call on some independent authority to summarise the position and to-day is published an article by Mr. C. S. Orwin, Director of the Institute for Research in Agricultural Economics, Oxford University. Among other distinctions Mr. Orwin has been Agricultural Assessor on the Agricultural Tribunal of Investigation, and has served on the Food Council. Mr. Orwin's summing up of the state of affairs in agriculture to-day is remarkably optimis-

IS IT NOT TIME that we had more clear'thinking and less loose statement about the position of England's great agricultural industry to-day? In the columns of the Morning Post and clsewhere we have been told that the land is being robbed of its fertility; that it is going out of cultivation and even going derelict; that ranching mothods applied to large units are squeezing out the middle-sized farms and the industrious yeomen who farm them; that agricultural workers are drifting away from the land; and it is constantly asserted that farmers are losing money.

What a depressing story to tell of the nation's greatest industry! Of course, those responsible for spreading it believe what they tell us, but let us examine some of their statements to see how they stand investigation.

Is the land being robbed of its fertility? No, it is not. Fertilisers were never so abundant nor so cheap as they are today. The yield of all crops, allowing for seasonal variations, shows no evidence of diminution. The area under intensive cropping, such as sugar beet and market gardening, is more than it ever was. There are no grounds whatever for saying that the land as a whole is being robbed of its fertility.

Is land going out of cultivation and even going derelict? Of course it is going out of cultivation. How equid it be otherwise in the face of the constant absorption for building purposes of land round every town, whether large or small, and even round nearly every village? New road construction and improvement is also taken its toll not to mention the increasing number of aerodromes-Government, municipal, and private. But there are half a million more cattle in the country than there were before the War, and nearly a million and a half more pigs. Even though there has been a small decrease in the number of sheep, these figures do not suggest that the volume of farming is declining, in spite of the inevitable fall in the total area under crops and grass.

Are ranching methods squeezing out the middle-sized farmer? Most decidedly they are not. Here is a table showing the changes in the numbers of holdings of different sizes in 1915, 1925, and 1935, taken from the official "Agricultural Statistics."

Size Group. 1915. 1925. . 1935. 1 to 50 acres 247,181 222,419 198,566 49,286 49,847 51,050 50 to 100 27,661 27,309 27,595 100 to 150 34,524 32,493 81,595 150 to 800 13,985 12,895 11,665 Over 300 A sub-division of the farms over 300 acres was not made until 1934, so it is not possible to say what the tendency was before this, but for 1934 and 1935 the changes recorded were as follows: Size Group. 1934. 1935 300 to 500 acres .. 8,686 8,692 500 to 700 , 1,890 1,925 • • 700 to 1,000 739

Over 1,000 315 · 308 There is not the smallest evidence here for saying that the middle-sized farmer is being crushed out of existance. It is the small-holders who have declined the most, notwithstanding all the efforts made towards land settlement, while the middle-sized farms show practically no changes, and there has been no increase in great farms.

Are agricultural workers leaving the "land? Yes, they are, and the reasons are not far to seek. There has been a great decline in the number of agricultural workers maintained on estate work. Statistics are not available, but everyone in the country knows it. Estates have been broken up, and on those that are left, the incidence of taxation on land has compelled landowners to reduce the number of men whom they formerly maintained on work about parks, woodlands, &c., some of it useful, no doubt, but much of it not directly productive.

Then the industrial organisation of farm labour, giving rural workers a much higher standard of living-long overdue-has made it necessary for farmers to reorganise the use of labour so as to keep labour cost down. The spread of barn machinery, tractors, milking machines, and every sort of device to increase the value of the output of each pair of hands, has reduced the labour staff required on the land, and many of the younger men are entering other occupations.

The lack of any unemployment insurance scheme for rural workers, until a year ago, tempted many men, also, to seek employment in insured trades. To-day a new force is operating which takes men off the land to work on Government contracts, and in districts where aerodrome constructions is in progress, for example, farmers are often feeling the competition for labour very acutely. If the increase in industrial activity should grow and be maintained, a very serious labour crisis may arise on the land, but it will not be due to any agricultural decline.

· Are farmers losing money? Some of them may be. It is common knowledge that graziers and feeders of beef cattle have been making nothing, and the rise in the cost of feeding stuffs has reduced the rate of profit on other class of livestock, particularly where the proportion of those dependent upon purchased foods, as in the poultry industry, is. high. Over the country generally, however, the effect of tariffs, quotas, subsidies, and marketing schemes has been to bring about a substantial recovery in rices since the days of the depresssion, and farmers are holding their own. Rents are being paid more punctually and farms let more readily. Of some branches of farming more could be said. Hop-growers, for example, are making their fortunes under the Hops Marketing Scheme; and the Wheat Act, the Beet Sugar subsidy, and the Potato Marketing Board have restored the financial position in the arable countries. The Milk Marketing Board, too whatever the consumer may think of the results of its activities, has

rescued the milk industry from a very dangerous position. At the moment,

then, any farmer who is reasonably efficient should be holding his own.

C. S. ORWIN

(Director of the Institute for Research in Agricultural Economics,

Oxford University)

So much for some of the statements which trouble the seeker after truth about agriculture; but there are other questions of far greater importance which confront the industry and the country to-day. We are told, on the one hand, that a new direction of policy is needed, in the interests of public health, which would stimulate the production and consumption of certain foods in quantities far greater' than those in which they are produced and consumed to-day.

We are told on the other hand that food production is the country's first line of defence, and that in the present unsettled state of the world it should be developed and directed into certain channels, Much has been written in the last year or so on malnutrition, and if some of the statements made about it can be taken at their face value, a very large proportion of the population is being inadequately or improperly fed. The need which farming has for State assistance is the opportunity, it is suggested, for the State to direct production along lines which will produce the greatest quantity of the so-called health foods, the fresh foods of all kinds, and make them available to all classes of the community, either by subsidising production or consumption.

At the same time, it is implied, of course, that special assistance to products such as wheat and sugar beet deficient in vitamin content and cheaply imported, should be discontinued. This would appear to conflict with the demand for an agricultural policy based on national defence, for in a time of danger it is the production of the fundamental foodstuffs, carbohydrates and proteins such as bread, meat, potatoes, &c., that is needed rather than the organisation of a more liberal diet which would include fruit, vegetables, eggs and fresh dairy products in greater quantity.

To sum up, the position seems to be that the State may claim to have succeded in maintaining production from the land and employment upon it at levels as high as the economic circumstances of the time allow. This success, however, has been achieved by organising -nssistance-indiscriminately to all branches of the farming industry. The question now is whether this is the best policy. Its tendency, of course, is to stabilise agricultural development by making all branches equally attractive. The suggestion is that while farmers might produce what they liked while the industry was unprotected, the call for State assistance should be opportunity of the State to plan the home farming industry so as to direct production and employment into those channels through which they will give the greatest service to the nation. Whether these channels should lead to better national health, or to greater self-sufficiency, or to increasing employment, are political questions which it. is not the purpose of this article to answer.

HONGKO N G'S Chinese football enthusiasts have realised a great wish. Other very interesting information has also been received from the Corinthians' manager. Brig.-General E. B. Macnaghten presided over the gathering. IN PRACTICE MATCH SIAMESE PLAYERS IN ACTION AT THE RECREIO

DEMONSTRATE BALL GAME TO A DELIGHTED CROWD

(By "Veritas")

ONLY those who have played both types of games can appreciate how difficult it is for players, accustomed to playing outdoor! badminton with the heavy rubber-based shuttlecocks, to make a quick and successful change to the indoor game, with its light "bird" which travels so very much slower.

This is the difficulty which confronts the Siamese badminton players who are to meet Hongkong exponents in an unofficial Interport to-morrow and again on Saturday evening at the Club de Recreio.

PLAY CLEVER BADMINTON

It is really remarkable how rapidly the visitors are necustoming themselves to these entirely different conditions. Last evening at the Club de Recreio, they gave a highly creditable account of themselves in a practice match.

BEAT OLIVEIRA AND REMEDIOS

Particularly impressive was Chart Shaw and Choot Shaw, the brothers who are playing first pair for Siam. They swept M. A. Oliveira and J. J. Remedios, Recreio's best couple, off the court to win a game 21-7. Agile, hard hitting, with tricks galore, they set a pace which the local boys could Olympic Torch not withstand. The Siamese, especially these Shaw brothers, are first-rate withstand. The Siamese, especially these Shaw brothers, are first-rate exhibitionists. Marvellously dextrous with their rackets, they can make winning shots with their rackets twined around their backs, and I have not seen anybody in Hongkong' so adept at picking up smashes.

This pair will easily hold their own against the Colony's best talent. Both boys also play a neat game of singles. Chart Shaw has most of the strokes and a very thorough knowledge of the most effective type of court-craft. Last night, when playing against Oliveira to whom, he lost, he could not gain reliable control over his drop shots, but as a tactician he was superior to the Recreio player, Lek and Amporn, Siam's second string, are not yet at home with the indoor game. A belief that "it should not be impossible" to transport the Olymple flame from Athens to Tokyo in 1940 by air was expressed by Mr. William M. Garland, American member of the International Olymple Committee, in an exclusive interview with Domei.

Such a possibility, he suggested, was foreshadowed by the sensational flight of the Asahi's monoplane The Divine (Wind from Tokyo (to London in less than four days.

RIFLE SHOOTING CORONATION PRIZE

MEETING

Certain members of the Hongkong Rifle Association, who wish to remain anonymous, have presented a number of small silver and bronze Coronation medals and two large silver ones for compelition by members of the Association, to commemorate the Coronalion.

Command Headquarters have allotted the Army ranges at Kowloon City for May 26 when these medals and other prizes in kind which have been presented by other members will be shot for.

The events are open only to individual full members and affiliated members cannot take part unless they transfer to full membership class. There will be four events in all, each consisting of one sighting shot, and five to count, at 200, 300, 500, and 600 yards. All ties will be decided by "counting out," and not by "shooting off," if it can be avoided. The prizes to be awarded in each event consist of one small silver and two small bronze Medals for those making the highest scores, using the S.R. (a) rifle. A precisely similar prize list will be available for those-

using the "1914" rifle. There will be no entrance fee for any of the events. If possible, arrangements will be made to reserve one or two targets for egg-pool shooting, a separate series being "run" for each distance. Entries will cost 10 cents each, and 70 per cent. of the proceeds will be returned to those making the highest scores.

HIGHEST AGGREGATE In addition to these events, a large silver Coronation Medal will be awarded to the competitor making the highest aggregate score at all four distances using the S.R. (a) rifle and a similar medal will be awarded to the competitor who uses the S.R. (b) weapon. There again will be no entrance fee for this aggregate -competition and, if necessary, the results will be decided by "counting out" in the usual manner. A competitor must shoot with the same type of rifle throughout the four

Ammunition must be provided by units, or individual competitors, and must have been manufactured not later than 1920.

It would be much appreciated if the secretaries of the affiliated clubs would communicate with Major D. H. Steers (Telephone 34121, Extension 22) not later than noon on Saturday giving the numbers (not names) of those who intend to take part. Without this information, it will be impossible to arrange a timetable for the events.

FEES MUST BE PAID No competitor who has failed to pay his subscription for the current year will be allowed to compete. Mrs. R. D. Walker, wife of the President and Chairman of the Council of the Association, will distribute the prizes and the Belillos Shield .-- Ifpossible, the prizes for the H.K.R.A. Thirty Roll will also be distributed. As the meeting is an all-day one, and entries are free, other than those for the egg-pool, it is hoped that competitors will assist the Association by having tiffin and tea at the usual prices in the Clubhouse. On this day the Canteen will be reserved for the use of Officers only.

BACKSTAGE

WHEN ALUS SAID AND DONE By Herbert Swears

(Geoffrey Bles, 12s. 6d.) Sa personal friend of most of London's theatre folk for Afty years, the author supplies a gossipy insight into their off-stage lives, amusing enough even if much of the matter lacks the charm of novelty. Dramatist and impresario, he spent forty-seven years in the Bank of England—a pleasant service, with the 1932 War Loan Conversion as its biggest thrill next to the 1914 return to paper money. Mr. Swears' early contacts with the stage ripened, despite a nervousness of Bohemin, and his stories of Tree, Alexander, Wyndham and Forbes-Robertson are knowledgeable and human. Most are about the Kendals. Dame Madge, a trenchant actress full of stubborn prejudices, declined to act because Salvini was in a box, and was furious when the B.B.C. provided her with a text of Shakespeare that she knew by heart. She and her husband refused to stop their dinner during an air raid, because "the soup might get cold."

I like best their dining at the Trocadero, when Bir Joseph Lyons, a fervent admirer, insisted on waiting on them himselff

Clement Scott's attack on the morals of players, which proved his downfall, recalled. The author met many famous wits, but never heard anything good from Mostyn Piggott, Col. Newnham-Davis or old Odell.

Happily, there is good fun and plenty of interest in his records and not too much lamenting—although he declares that the judgment of the average theatre manager to-day is "usually both timid and faulty"—with which many will concur.

MONEY-POWER

RULERS OF AMERICA By Anna Rochester

(Lawrence and Wishart, 12s. 6d.) STRIPPED of his trappings, the American millionaire is not a pleasant spectacle. This book, armed with an arsenal of proven facts, reveals him as what he usually is-n greedy, self-centred person, whose main concern is to safeguard his position as a "ruler of America."

Indeed, it is not easy to believe that he really exists. What sort of a human being can it have been, for instance, who decided to send thousands of telegrams to congressmen, signing them with names taken from the telephonebook, in an attempt to make them vote to controlled by the leading-strings of big against a bill which threatened his business. interests?

Miss Rochester's book shows how the scramble for money-power has made: men willing to throw aside all common hands of one mammoth trust. decency in order to obtain their ends.

It shows, too, how firmly the great-financial trusts hold in their grip the -politicians of America and—through tie-ups with London and Paris-the

This high-brow pundit dislikes the play. "The wonder is," he tells us, that Shakespeare, who above all others knew the sanctity of the human soul, and who put into the mouth of Hamlet the most eloquent expression of the essential dignity of man, should be capable of writing 'King Henry V,' the chronicle of one of the most wanton sacrifices most humiliating aspect."

PROPERTY & IMPROPERTY By J. A. Hobson (Gollancz, 4s. 6d.)

AR. HOBSON takes the view that the distortions and distinctions in the distribution of property are a major barrier to sound economic reform. And, in the attainment of a clear understanding of just what property is, he sees the way to overcome one of the last intellectual defences of present-day society.

Towards that understanding this book, by one of the world's greatest economists, is a substantial contribution.

There are only two kinds of property: the right and the wrong. The right kind includes objects expressive of personal effort and personal satisfaction - in their simplest form, household possessions, things necessary for the general good.

The wrong kind are the monopolies, rights exercised over individuals-that which provides the opportunities for exploitation: in a word, Improperty. And, on the difference between right and wrong, has been built up the whole topsy-turvy structure of economic disequilibrium which makes the world to-day so dangerously out of balance. 🐬

What is reasonably proper property, what is manifestly improper, the consequences of conferring. upon individuals the opportunity: for continuing economic inequality, the growth of a proletarian attack on that inequality—all this is analysed here with refreshing honesty.

"Only in the adoption of a common international policy, condemning national as well as class exploitation and setting all property upon a right-footing as an Instrument of human service, can we attain the social ideal.

"But we need not wait for this distant achievement before setting ourselves to the plainer and nearer task of putting our national economy on an equitable basis."

The wasten and the injustices of improperty are clear enough. Here is the road to remedy. And it is a road with all the obstacles made clear by Mr. Hobson's brilliant intellectual searchlight. 5. E. R. W.

RECORDING BEATS OF THE HEART

New Aid for Doctors

(By A Medical Correspondent)

"OUIET, please, now. Right; O.K. for sound,

This is what may soon he heard in Harley-street consulting-rooms. Instead of whipping a stethoscope out of his coat-tail pocket, the up-to-date physician will have the sound unit wheeled in, and in five minutes have a gramophone record made of his · patient's heartbeats...

If he wishes a second opinion on the case, he can spare the patient a further call lower down the street simply by sending round the disc for his colleague to play over at leisure to himself.

The appartatus that makes this possible is the phonostethograph, described in the Lancet by its inventor, Dr. C. Vaughan Henriques.

SLOW MOTION VERSION

It consists of a carbon microphone applied by an elastic band to the chest, and coupled to a four-stage valve amplifier specially fitted with filters which allow unwanted sounds to be cut out.

With the ordinary stethoscope sounds made by the patient's breath often drown those of the heart. These can be completely eliminated by the filters.

An electric recording is made on a master disc, which can be made to give a slow-motion version for the study of intricate

While the recording is in process the physician, listening-in himself by loudspeaker or carphones, adds his running commentary to the record. Months later, if the patient returns he can listen to his previous opinion and the findings on which it was based. The phonostethograph is likely to be used extensively in the training of medical students. The original model is now installed in a laboratory at King's College Hospital Medical School, London.

A sub-committee reported the story of a woman relative of the dead man that she 'phoned the doctor's house at midnight on December 30 last, a day after the man's wife had been taken to hospital. She was told the doctor was out and would come when he returned.

She 'phoned again at 1 a.m. and at 8.45 a.m., stating the address each time. She 'phoned two or three more times before midday.

8.15 p.m. and then remarked that he could not attend two patients at once. The patient's brother told the sub-committee that on the afternoon of December 31 he found him very Ill and called in another doctor, who ordered the patient to hospital where he died eight hours later from broncho-pneumonia.

DOCTOR'S VERSION The first doctor, sald the subcommittee, had told them that between one and two a.m. on December 31 he found a message, left with his clerk, that he was wanted at "X house." He went there, found it in darkness, and could not get in. He returned at 8.30 a.m. and was told there had been no call for him. He then went on his rounds.

At 6 p.m. he learned there had been more telephone calls, but that the address was "Y house." It was not until the 8.45 a.m. call that the position of the house had been made clear to his clerk. .

'The woman relative," added the reports, "was quite unshaken in her statement that she gave this information on the first occasion. The doctor said it was the practice of his clerk to note the addresses from which the requests for visits came, but not the name of the patients, and consequently it was impossible for him to refer to the medical record.

"We have examined the record, and found it contained the correct address. When questioned as to his attitude when the relatives of the patient criticised him for not having attended earlier, the practi-tioner was quite unable to explain why he should have referred to his imbility to attend two patients at once, rather than, as we should have thought, pointing out, as he told us, that he had already made two attempts to see the patient, but, owing to the alleged lack of clarity in the giving of the address, that he had been unable to find

Warsaw, April 19. At the Warsaw Zoo this morning the 19-year-old female elephant Kasia gave birth to a healthy little daughter weighing about 220lb.

HOSTSFENCECASTLEWHERE WEDDING WILL TAKE PLACE

Monts, France, May 19.

Lawyers to-day filed all legal documents conforming to French marriage laws with flustered French officials in the tiny town hall of this village, suddenly brought to world-wide fame by the Duke of Windsor's decision to marry here.

The documents included Mrs. Simpson's and the Duke of Windsor's birth certificates, duly certified by British and American registrars. In addition, Mrs. Simpson's lawyers tendered her two divorce papers, and consular certificates were handed in, showing that both were free to marry under both British and American

It now appears certain that Mrs. Simpson will not promise to "obey", nor will the Duke of Windsor promise to "support" his wife during the actual civil wedding ceremony. However, the Mayor of Monts, M. Mercier, after pronouncing ritualistic questions will say: "In the name of the law, I declare you united in the bonds of marriage."

BEAUTY IN WOOD

Straight Grained OAK:.

AY Coronation furnishing colours will B bring woods into prominence this year, for. furniture provides the balance and contrast which is so important to the success of an interior scheme.

New fashions in wood lean towards lightness, and there are several new woods and finishes which are as attractive as they sound.

Flame birch, for example, is a creamy wood with a rosy flush and flguring which reminds one of leaping flames; the creamy whiteness of sycamore will appeal to people who like plain surfaces; golden woods include instural birch and bird's-eye maple, and there are several new shades in walnut and in waxed and weathered oak.

Sygamore. & Ebony

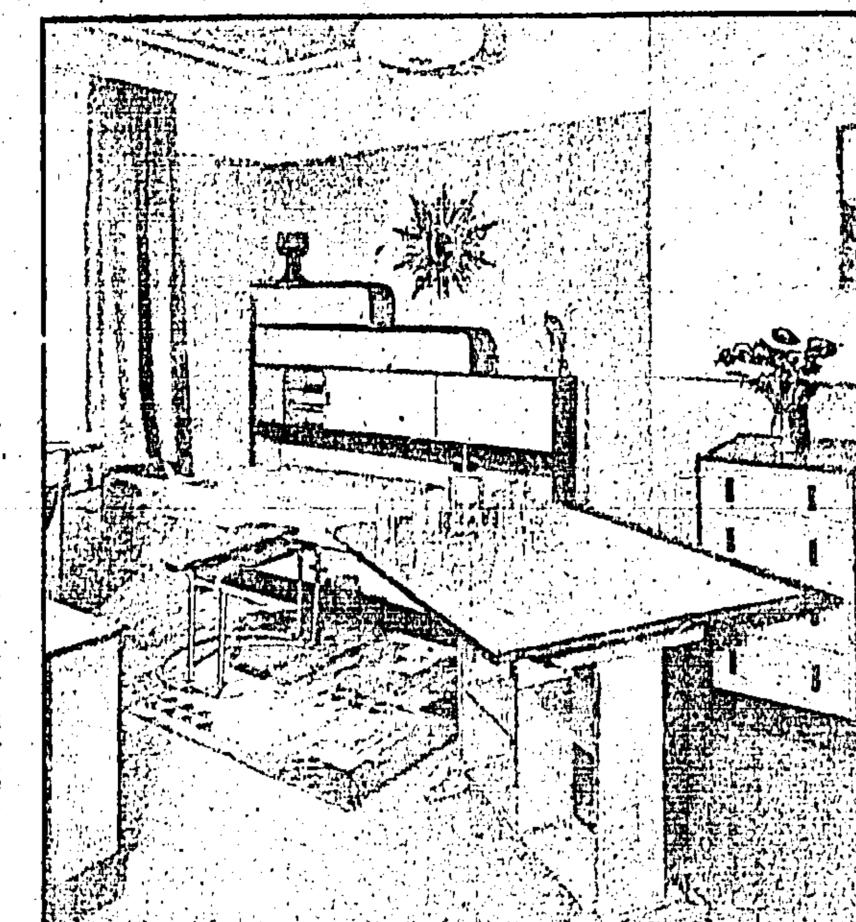

Among the walnuts is a particularly lovely straightgrained wood which comes from Australia.

There is also the charm of contrast in the furniture itself. Sycamore is banded with darker burr wainut and sometimes with macassar ebony; quartering provides interesting contrasts in the arrangement of the grain.

You will find that all these new woods are supremely adaptable, for their lightness lends itself to wider colour harmonies in the rest of the furnishings. The new furniture, too, shows ideas for saving space. A dining room suite in flame birch is a good example. This has a round pedestal dining table with a good solid base, specially designed for a small dining room. Although smaller than the orthodox oblong shape, it will seat four to five people in comfort.

The sideboard to go with it has a tier of six small drawers on one side, which struck me as practical for the

GREAT problem in any house is cupboard

Built-in Cupboards are the ideal thing. They take up the least room.

If you are hard pressed for space, cupboard with sliding doors is best, but for convenience nothing beats a plain cupboard with ordinary doors with a lock.

THE situation of a linen cupboard is very important on account of the heating it

Find if you can a convenient recess for it near your bathroom or kitchen. Then the pipes can generally easily be extended to the bottom of it.

The cupboard should be fitted up with shelves made of boards about an inch and a half apart, to allow the hot air to rise to the top.

When the linen comes back from the laundry each week, always put At at the bottom of the pile which is already in the cupboard. Then it is certain to get properly aired and only goes to the laundry in its turn, getting less wear and tear.

Kitchen Cupboards

THE average kitchen is so I small you can hardly turn round in it, and there is seldom room for more than one cupboard. So it needs very careful planning. A good tip is to space two or three wide shelves (or as many as you can int in) two feet apart; and put a shelf thalf the width of these wide ones in

A cupboard like this is easy to keep tidy because you can see everything at a glance. Put in a few nails at the back

BOY, 16, STRANDED, MONTHS GET HOME

Had 4s. 6d. In His Pocket

TIMMY HALL, sixteenyear-old sailor boy, got on the wrong train. When he found himself stranded London with only 4s. 6d. he worked his way back to Newcastle, 270 miles away, walking most of the way. It took him three months.

Questions were asked about his exploit in the House of Commons when Miss Irene Ward (Con., Wallsend) told Sir John Simon, the Home Secretary, that the Admiralty phoned Scotland-yard about the disappearance of the boy, and that Scotland-yard withheld information. Sir John replied that the Admiralty were satisfied that the police gave all the information they had.

HERE'S HIS STORY

This is the story of James Hall's travels pieced together from police reports, friends' stories, and Sir John-

.Simon's statement. James, an only son whose father dled from war wounds, had achieved his life's ambition and joined the Navy-after his mother had tried to dissuade him.

He spent his Christmas leave with his mother, who is caretaker of business property in Eldon-square, Newcastle.

On January 4 his leave expired. His mother saw him comfortably seated in a train for Harwich, where his training ship Ganges lay. There was a fond embrace between mother and son and young Hall spoke to his mother of the time when he would again get back to Newcastle to see her. But James changed thto a train which landed him at King's Cross with the 4s. 0d. in his pocket. He decided to work his way back to Newcastle. Relatives thought he had been shanghaled. His mother worried, developed a nervous breakdown. Then Newcastle police found Hall -before he had reached his homeand sent him, back to his ship.

WORLD'S BEST THEATRE FOR B.B.C.

(By Jonah Barrington)

XX7ORK is to begin at once on television's first theatre, which will create a revolution in production methods.

The theatre at Alexandra Palace, leased to the B.B.C. when they went there last summer but disused for lack of funds, will be equipped at the cost of a special Government grant. The auditorium will be altered to let dozen or more stage sets be built round the walls.

Televised plays will be able to shift from scene to scene without interruption by fading out one camera and fading in another. Variety artists will be able to perform in front of their own scenery, as in a music hall.

Great galleries will be built in the roof to house the cameras for overhead shots. The most up-to-date system of lighting will be installed. At present television has only one small, studio, necessitating a fade-out and an interval when the scenery is shifted. Within eight months it will have the largest and best equipped studio in the world.

It is the desire to preserve

peace which leads nations into ttreaties, alliances and accords which, frequently, if not inevitably, bear quite a different fruit than that desired. But at the moment diplomats are putting the finishing touches upon a three-power peace preservation pact in Europe to which Great Britain. France and Russia are parties, and others are clearing. the way for what gives promise of being a more solid system of security in the Far East. Both these movements are born of fear. They are the outgrowth of a desire of leaders to avoid cause of clash in the future; and yet they differ materially. The first, the Anglo-Franco-Russian alignment, is directed against a specific party—the so-called Rome-Berlin axis, to which it is the apparent-desire of its originators to attract the smaller Central European powers with a view to spreading the influence of the Nazi and Fascist nations. In effect, the accord is the answer to Austria's plea for an assurance of protection against encroachment by her powerful neighbours, and for that reason, because of the incipient threat it contains, will probably heighten the animosity of the Nazi-Fascist people against the more democratically inclined fathers of the "peace machinery." Thus it defeats its purpose. The nations are approaching the alignment in the Far East in quite a different way. It appears to be the desire to arrange an accord which will obviate the necessity of forming defensive alliances. To do this a first step is obviously to secure a frank and complete statement of foreign policy by all parties affected and generally clear the air of any distrust or suspicion, the presence of which is fatal to the never very robust peace of the Far East. The State of Agriculture

AN INVESTIGATION

For some time past the state of agriculture in England has been agitating many minds and the articles of Agricultural Corresponents have been keenly followed whether with approval or disapproval. Such was, indeed, the interest that it was decided to call on some independent authority to summarise the position and to-day is published an article by Mr. C. S. Orwin, Director of the Institute for Research in Agricultural Economics, Oxford University. Among other distinctions Mr. Orwin has been Agricultural Assessor on the Agricultural Tribunal of Investigation, and has served on the Food Council. Mr. Orwin's summing up of the state of affairs in agriculture to-day is remarkably optimis-

IS IT NOT TIME that we had more clear thinking and loss loose statement about the position of England's great agricultural industry to-day? In the columns of the Morning Post and elsewhere we have been told that the land is being robbed of its fertility; that it is going out of cultivation and even going derelict; that ranching methods applied to large units are squeezing out the middle-sized forms and the industrious yeomen who farm them; that agricultural workers are drifting away from the land; and it is constantly asserted that farmers are losing money. What a depressing story to tell of the nation's greatest industry! Of course, those responsible for spreading it believo what they tell us, but let us examine some of their statements to see how they stand investigation.

Is the land being robbed of its fertility? No. it is not. Fertilisers were never so abundant nor so cheap as they are today. The yield of all crops, allowing for seasonal variations, shows no evidence of diminution. The area under intensive cropping, such as sugar beet and market gardening, is more than it ever was. There are no grounds whatever for saying that the land as a whole is being robbed of its fertility.

Is land yoing out of cultivation and even going derelict? Of course it is going out of cultivation. How could it be otherwise in the face of the constant absorption for building purposes of land round every town, whether large or small, and even round nearly every village? New road construction and improvement is also taken its toll not to mention the increasing number of aerodromes-Government, municipal, and private. But there are half a million more cattle in the country than there were before the War, and nearly a mil-declining, in spite of the inevitable fall in the total area under crops and grass. Are ranching methods squeezing out the middle-sized farmer? Most decidedly they are not. Here is a table showing the changes in the numbers of holdings of different sizes in 1915, 1925, and 1935, taken from the official "Agricullion and a half more pigs. Even though there has been a small decrease in the number of sheep, these figures do not suggest that the volume of farming is tural Statistics." Size Group. 1915, 1925. 1935. 1 to 50 acres 247;181 222,419 198,566 50 to 100 49,286 49,847 51,050 100 to 150 27,661 27,309 27,595 150 to 300 34,524 32,493 31,595 Over 300 13,985 12,395 11,665

A sub-division of the farms over 300 acres was not made until 1934, so it is not possible to say what the tendency was before this, but for 1934 and 1935 the changes recorded were as follows:

Size Group. 1934. 1935 300 to 500 acres ... 8,686 8,692 500 to 700 1,890 1,925 700 to 1,000 Over 1,000

There is not the smallest evidence here for saying that the middle-sized farmer is being crushed out of existance, It is the small-holders who have declined the most, notwithstanding all the efforts made towards land settlement, while the middle-sized farms show practically no changes, and there has been no increase in great farms.

Are agricultural workers leaving the land? Yes, they are, and the reasons are not far to seek. There has been a great decline in the number of agricultural workers maintained on estate work. Statistics are not available, but everyone in the country knows it. Estates have been broken up, and on those that are left, the incidence of taxation on land has compelled landowners to reduce the number of men whom they formerly maintained on work about parks, woodlands, &c., some of it useful, no doubt, but much of it not directly productive.

Then the industrial organisation of farm labour, giving rural workers a much higher standard of living-long overdue-has made it necessary for farmers to reorganise the use of labour so as to keep labour cost down. The spread of barn machinery, tractors, milking machines, and every sort of device to increase the value of the output of each pair of hands, has reduced the labour staff required on the land, and many of the younger men are entering other occupations.

The lack of any unemployment insurance scheme for rural workers, until a year ago, tempted many men, also, to seek employment in insured trades. To-day a new force is operating which takes men off the land to work on Government contracts, and in districts where aerodrome constructions is in progress, for example, farmers are often feeling the competition for labour very acutely. If the increase in industrial activity should grow and be maintained, a very serious labour crisis may arise on the land, but it will not be due to any agricultural decline.

Are farmers losing money? Some of them may be. It is common knowledge that graziers and feeders of beef cattle have been making nothing, and the rise in the cost of feeding stuffs has reduced the rate of profit on other class of livestock, particularly where the proportion of those dependent upon purchased foods, as in the poultry industry, is high. Over the country generally, however, the effect of tariffs, quotas, subsidies, and marketing schemes has been to bring about a substantial recovery in rices since the days of the depresssion, and farmers are holding their own. Rents are being paid more punctually and farms let more readily. Of some branches of farming more could be said. Hop-growers, for example, are making their fortunes under the Hops Marketing Scheme; and the Wheat Act, the Beet Sugar subsidy, and the Potato Marketing Board have restored the financial position in the arable countries. The Milk Marketing

Board, too whatever the consumer may

think of the results of its activities, has

rescued the milk industry from a very ..

dangerous position. At the moment,

C. S. ORWIN

(Director of the Institute for Research in Agricultural Economics, Oxford University)

then, any farmer who, is reasonably efficient should be holding his own.

So much for some of the statements. which trouble the seeker after truth about agriculture; but there are other questions of far greater importance which confront the industry and the country to-day. We are told, on the one hand, that a new direction of policy is needed, in the interests of public health, which would stimulate the production and consumption of certain foods in quantities far greater than those in which they are produced and consumed to-day.

We are told on the other hand that food production is the country's first line of defence, and that in the present unsettled state of the world it should be developed and directed into certain channels. Much, has been written in the last year or so on malnutrition, and if some of the statements made about it can be taken at their face value, a very large proportion of the population is being inadequately or improperly fed. The need which farming has for State assistance is the opportunity, it is suggested, for the State to direct production along lines which will produce the greatest quantity of the so-called health foods, the fresh foods of all kinds, and make them available to all classes of the community, either by subsidising production or consumption,

At the same time, it is implied, of course, that special assistance to products such as wheat and sugar beet deficient in vitamin content and cheaply imported, should be discontinued. This. would appear to conflict with the demand for an agricultural-policy based on national defence, for in a time of danger it is the production of the fundamental foodstuffs, carbohydrates and proteins such as bread, meat, potatoes, &c., that is needed rather than the organisation of a more liberal diet which would include fruit, vegetables, eggs and fresh dairy products in greater quantity.

To sum up, the position seems to be that the State may claim to have succedaed in maintaining production from the land and employment upon it at levels as high as the economic circumstances of the time allow. This success, however, has been achieved by organising assistance indiscriminately to all branches of the farming industry. The question now is whether this is the best policy. Its tendency, of course, is tostabilise agricultural development by making all branches equally attractive. The suggestion is that while farmers might produce what they liked while the industry was unprotected, the call for State assistance should be opportunity of the State to plan the home farming industry so as to direct production and employment into those channels through which they will give the greatest service to the nation. Whether these channels should lead to better national health, or to greater self-sufficiency, or to increasing employment, are political questions which it is not the purpose of this article to answer.

Dublin, May 20. Mr. Eamon de Valera, chief executive of the Irish Free State, to-day in the Dail defended his decision to boycott the Empire Conference in London. The vital change in the date of the visit to Hongkong of the Islington Corinthians is that previously it was announced the squad could not reach Hongkong until the end of February. SIAMESE PLAYERS IN ACTION AT THE RECREIO

DEMONSTRATE BALL GAME TO DELIGHTED CROWD

(By "Veritas")

ONLY those who have played both types of games can appreciate how difficult it is for players, accustomed to playing outdoor! badminton with the heavy rubber-based shuttlecocks, to make a quick and successful change to the indoor game, with its light "bird" which travels so very much slower.

This is the difficulty which ! confronts the Siamese badminton players who are to meet Hongkong exponents in an unofficial Interport to-morrow and again on Saturday evening at the Club de Recreio.

IN PRACTICE MATCH

It is really remarkable how rapidly the visitors are accustoming themselves to these entirely different conditions. Last evening at the Club de Recrelo, they gave a highly. creditable account of themselves in n practice match.

Particularly impressive was Chart Shaw and Choot Shaw, the brothers who are playing first pair for Slam. They swept M. A. Oliveira and J. J. Remedios, Recreio's best couple, off the court to win a game 21-7. Agile, not withstand. The Slamese, especially these Shaw brothers, are first-rate withstand. The Siamese, especially these Shaw brothers, are first-rate exhibitionists. Marvellously dextrous with their rackets, they can make winning shots with their rackets twined around their backs, and I have not seen unybody in Hongkong so adept at picking up smashes.

This pair will easily hold their own against the Colony's best talent. Both boys also play a neat game of singles. Chart Shaw has most of the strokes and a very thorough knowledge of the most effective type of court-craft. Last night, when playing against Oliveira to whom he lost, he could not gain reliable control over his drop shots, but as a tactician he was superior to the Recrelo player.

Lek and Amporn. Slam's second string, are not yet at home with the indoor game. But Amporn has a beautiful and decisive smash, and also places his clearances very preparations now in progress in cleverly. It is in the short game that Tokyo for the XIIth Olympiad. RIFLE SHOOTING

CORONATION PRIZE MEETING

MEDALS AS AWARDS

Certain members of the Hongkong Rifle Association, who wish to remain anonymous, have presented a number of small silver and bronze Coronation medals and two large silver ones for competition by members of the Association, to commemorate the Coronation.

Command Headquarters have alloited the Army ranges at Kowloon City for May 26 when these medals and other prizes in kind which have been presented by other members will be shot for.

The events are open only to individual full members and affiliated members cannot take part unless they transfer to full membership class. There will be four events in all. each consisting of one sighting shot, and five to count, at 200, 300, 500, and 600 yards. All ties will be decided by "counting out," and not by "shooting off," if it can be avoided. The prizes to be awarded in each event consist of one small silver and two small bronze Medals for those making the highest scores, using the S.R. (a) rifle. A precisely similar prize list will be available for those using the "1914" rifle. · There will be no entrance fee for any of the events. If possible, arrangements will be made to reserve one or two targets for egg-pool shoating, a separate series being "run" for each distance. Entries will cost 10 cents each, and 70 per cent, of the proceeds will be returned to those making the highest scores.

HIGHEST AGGREGATE

In addition to these events, a large silver Coronation Medal will be awarded to the competitor making the highest aggregate score at all four distances using the S.R. (a) rifle and a similar medal will be awarded to the competitor who uses the S.R. (b) weapon. There again will be no entrance fee for this aggregate competition and, if necessary, the results will be decided by "counting

distances. Ammunition must be provided by units, or individual competitors, and must have been manufactured not later than 1929. It would be much appreciated if the secretaries of the affiliated clubs would communicate with Major D. H. Steers (Telephone 34121, Extension 22) not later than noon on Saturday giving the numbers (not names) of those who intend to take part. Without this information, it will be impossible to arrange a timetable for the events. FEES MUST BE PAID

No competitor who has failed to pay his subscription for the current ...year .. will be allowed to compete..... Mrs. R. D. Walker, wife of the President and Chairman of the Council of the Association, will distribute the prizes and the Belilios Shield. If possible, the prizes for the H.K.R.A. Thirty Roll will also be distributed. As the meeting is an all-day one, and entries are free, other than those for the egg-pool, it is hoped that competitors will assist the Association by having "iffin and tea at the usual prices in the Clubhouse. On this day the Canteen will be reserved for the use of Officers only.

WHEN ALL'S SAID AND DONE By Herbert Swears (Geoffrey Bles, 12s. 6d.)

8 a personal friend of most of London's theatre folk for A Milty years, the author supplies a gossipy insight into their off-stage lives, amusing enough even if much of the matter lacks

the charm of novelty. Dramatist and impresario, he spent forty-seven years in the Bank of England—a pleasant service, with the 1932 War Loan Conversion as its biggest thrill next to the 1914 return to paper money. Mr. Swears' early contacts with the stage ripened, despite a nervousness of Bohemia, and his stories of Tree, Alexander, Wyndham and Forbes-Robertson are knowledgeable and

human. Most are about the Kendals. Dame Madge, a trenchant actress full of stubborn prejudices, declined to act because Salvini was in a box, and was furious when the B.B.C. provided her with a text of Shakespeare that she knew by heart. She and her husband refused to stop their dinner dur, ing an air raid, because "the soup might get cold." . I like best their dining at the Trocadero, when Bir Joseph Lyons, a fervent admirer, insisted on walting on them himself i A queer story is of a house in the West End of London, where the late Mrs. Meyrick, night-club queen, could never sleep in her bedroom, feeling that someone was there. It transpired that Charles Hawtrey had died in the

'Clement Scott's attack on the morals of players, which proved his downfall, is recalled. The author met many famous wits, but never heard anything good from Mostyn Piggott, Col. Newnham-Davis or old Odell. Happily, there is good fun and plenty of interest in his records and not too much lamenting—although he declares that the judgment of the average theatre manager to-day is "usually both timid and faulty"-with which many will concur.

RULERS OF AMERICA

By Anna Rochester (Lawrence and Wishart, 12s: 6d.) TRIPPED of his trappings, the American millionaire is not a pleasant spectacle. This book, armed with an arsenal of proven facts, reveals him as what he usually is—a greedy, self-centred person, whose main concern is to safeguard his position as a "ruler of America," Indeed, it is not easy to believe that he really exists. What sort of a human being can it have been, for instance, who decided to send thousands of telegrams to congressmen, signing them with names taken from the telephonebook, in an attempt to make them vote against a bill which threatened his Interests?

Miss Rochester's book shows how the scramble for money-power has made men willing to throw aside all common . décency in order to obtain their ends.

It shows, too, how firmly the great financial trusts hold in their grip the politicians of America and—through tle-ups with London and Paris-the politicians of Europe as well. It will come as news to many people , that Morgan partners, the international bankers, had an advance confidential copy of the Treaty of

"The wonder is," he tells us, "that Shakespeare, who above all others knew the sanctity of human soul, and who put into the mouth of Hamlet the most eloquent expression of the essential dignity of man, should be capable of writing 'King Henry V,' the chronicle of one of the most wanton encrifices of human life in European history, and inost humillating aspect."

I call that pretty good going as a gratifying to have this unsolicited TWO golfers were playing a match looking at your watch? You make ledge of the sanctity of the human soul, whatever that may mean, but it is a bit of a staggerer to have Agincourt labelled as base and humillating.

HOBSON'S CHOICE

PROPERTY & IMPROPERTY By J. A. Hobson (Gollancz, 4s. 6d.)

A R. HOBSON takes the view that the distortions and distinctions in the distribution of property are a major barrier to sound economic reform. And, in the attainment of a clear understanding of just what property is. he sees the way to overcome one of the last intellectual defences of present-day society.

Towards that understanding this book, by one of the world's greatest economists, is a substantial contribution.

. There are only two kinds of property: the right and the wrong. The right kind includes objects expressive of personal effort and personal satisfaction - in their simplest form, household possessions, things necessary for the general good.

'The wrong kind are the monopolies, rights exercised over individuals—that which provides the opportunities for exploitation: in a word, Improperty. And, on the difference between right and wrong, has been built up the whole topsy-turvy structure of economic disequilibrium which makes the world to-day so dangerously out of

What is reasonably proper property, what is manifestly improper, the consequences of conferring upon individuals the opportunity for continuing economic inequality. the growth of a proletarian attack on that inequality—all this is analysed here with refreshing honesty.

"Only in the adoption of a common international policy, condemning national hs well as class exploitation and setting all property upon a right footing as an instrument of human service, can we attain the social ideal.

"But we need not wait for this distant achievement before setting ourselves to the plainer and nearer task of putting our national economy on an equitable basia."

. The wastes and the injustices of improperty are clear enough. Here is the road to remedy. And it is a road with all the obstacles made clear by Mr. Hobson's brilliant intellectual
